Teamwork evident in musical production

By Heidi McClain

As the curtain goes down the audience applauds and thinks what a wonderful musical they have just seen. But how often do people stop to think of all the hard work that goes on behind the curtains.

To know the full story, they must look beyond the polished surface of the musical. They must learn about small details such as rewiring lights, building costumes, and long rehearsals. Traditionally people involved in theater work long and hard to produce a few evenings of pleasure for the audiences.

According to Bob Loss, drama instructor, his family played a big role in getting the musical ready. His oldest son, Jamme, Great Bend sophomore, did most of the detail work in dressing the stage.

With the help of the stagecraft class, Loss built a three-tier setting. He said, "We have the responsibility of making this safe, so it will not collapse."

His youngest son, Jason, Great Bend sophomore, did most of the lighting. Loss said, "Lighting must reflect mood and scenes therefore, this person needs to understand the show. My son has a knack for understanding this."

Another demand that had to be met was for a runway built in front of the orchestra. The lighting facilities were not adequate for this, so Jason had to redo the lighting in the auditorium.

Loss said, "When planning a musical such as, 'Hello Dolly' the director asks several questions. Is the facility capable of handling such a musical? Do you have an individual who can handle the lead role?"

Auditions took place in December and the actors and actresses started practicing eight weeks before opening night.

Along with rehearsals and long hours, the audience does not get to see all the stopping and adjustments done by the orchestra. According to, Orchestra Director, Brian Coyle, the musicians practiced weekly and then rehearsed every night the week before opening. Coyle said, "The orchestra did a terrific job for the limited number of rehearsals."

Pat Shartz, Ellinwood sophomore, who played Barnaby, said "I went out because, first of all it's my major, second because I enjoy it, I have a swell time doing it. It's the only thing I can do and express my true artistic motives."

Jimmy Brough, Great Bend freshman, who was a dancer, said "This was my first musical, I enjoy singing, and it counts as a humanities credit for my degree."

Whether performing as an actor, singer, dancer, chorus member, or working behind the scenes, by taking part in the spring musical, each person becomes an interdependent part of a team producing the final product for the audience.

Last year's champs return to dominate

By Tina Herrera

The Barton County Community College cross country team is developing a fine reputation. For the second year in a row, the women have taken first at the national community college meet and the men took 10th in the nation.

The women took first with 26 points over their closest competitor, Central Oregon, with 49 points. Mardrea Hyman, Clarendon, Jamaica, freshman, came in first in 18:01 with Nicole Johnson, Lawrence sophomore, coming in second in 18:44. Nancy Torres, Laredo, Texas, freshman, finished third in 18:52 with Rachel Jaurez, San Antonio sophomore, taking fifth in 19:09. Karen Bennett, St. Catherine, Jamaica, freshman, finished 19th. All of the women made All-American honors at the national meet.

Head coach Randy Cole said, "Put together their hard work and consistent training and they're the most talented group we had. They were eager to do well and very determined."

Besides placing 10th at the national meet, the men won the Jayhawk Conference, Kansas Wesleyan Invitational, Garden City Invitational, and took second in the Region VI meet. Cole said the men had a shot at placing seventh at nationals, the point difference was close between the runners.

Achieving all of these honors was not an easy thing to accomplish. Some of these runners started their careers early in school. "I've been running ever since I was in the seventh grade when my uncle influenced me. He was always talking about what he'd won. So I tried it and in a couple of years I was successful. But I didn't start cross country until the ninth grade." Eric Logan, East St. Louis, Ill., freshman said.

Bennett has been running since the sixth grade, and Ramon Lacey, Alton, Ill., freshman, and Torres have run since the seventh grade.

"When I was in the fifth grade, I was in the 50 yard dash with a bunch of guys and I ended up outrunning them. That's when I knew I had skill." Juarez said.

Training is one of the most important factors in a successful season. "They need to be able to run a certain amount of mileage. The men averaged 70 miles a week (10 miles a day) and the women averaged 50 miles a week (7 miles a day). We tried to combine running with strength work, fast pace efforts for a long period of time on the road and lots of hill training." Cole said.

Not only is cross country distance, but also it is speed. "Most of our training is speedwork. Some of it (about 40%) over distance. We mostly concentrate on speedwork such as 100m, 200m, 400m, and 500 meters." Logan said.

Cross country is an individual sport. Runners have to have a drive within themselves to put their bodies through this physically and emotionally strenuous activity. Their reasons for running varied from person to person. Lacey said he enjoys running because it is a chance to get away from everything if he is having a lot of problems. Wilson Koech, Indianola, Iowa, freshman, on the other hand said he wanted to continue his education and there were no other means but to run and get a scholarship. Juarez and Torres also wanted to continue their education, but Juarez said her high school coach, Linda Payne, influenced her to run and keep at it.

"She told me I had a lot of skill and I could use it as a ticket out of the west side...She always believed in me. When I was trying to give up, or saying I couldn't do it anymore, she would always be there to help me, to say 'Things aren't always going to be easy.'"

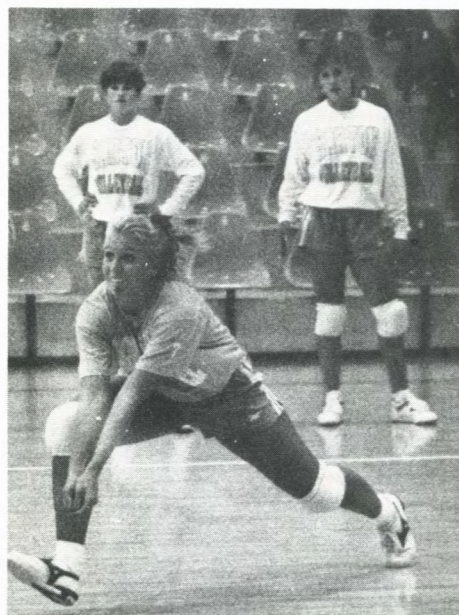

Some of the runners have been so successful that the Olympic trials were a possibility. Koech said he was not going to this year's trials, but future Olympics may be in sight. Hyman said she would definitely be at the trials. "I don't think that I am in that type of shape for that type of speedwork or race" Logan said. Lacey said he had too much talent to just go to waste and said he soon hopes to go.

The BCCC cross country team established a very respectable reputation with all of the honors they worked so hard to achieve. This season may be over, but the memories of accomplished goals will remain with the runners and their supporters, as well as with BCCC, for many years to come.

Cougars finish 51-7

By Heidi McClain

A drive to win dominated the cougar volleyball team, this year. "This team maximized its potential as much as any team we've ever had, it was tremendous," Ray Bechard, head volleyball coach said.

The team has made it to nationals six times in the last seven years. The Cougars knocked down Jefferson College, Missouri to earn a birth in the national tournament in Miami. "It was a real worthy accomplishment to finish fourth in the national tournament," Bechard said.

The Cougars had an overall record of 51 wins and seven losses. Bechard said the Cougars worked on serving the ball more aggressively this year, and they made it a point to realize that everybody had a role on the team.

Hawaiian theme highlights Homecoming

By Lynnette Wilkening

"I was honored being up a second time, it showed me that the students and faculty consider me in high favor," Botzler said when he found out he had been selected as a final candidate.

Student Senate planned Homecoming Week festivities. A lip sync contest was scheduled but was cancelled because of lack of participation. A card and board game evening was held in the Student Union. The Hilltop Singers performed for students during a lunch hour. The final candidates were introduced and they participated in an interviewing process where they were asked to tell what they thought were three positive and three negative things about Barton County Community College.

Most candidates seemed to agree that the biggest asset to BCCC are the friendly teachers who are so willing to help.

McNeil said she found it hard to say anything negative about BCCC. She said she told the interview committee, "It's a junior college, and it's like starting my senior year of high school all over because I have to make the decision of where I'm going to go on to school."

About 101 high school seniors and their parents attended Senior Day activities the afternoon before the game. The seniors were welcomed by Mary Misedgadis, Ph.D, Dean of Student Affairs, who introduced administrators of the college. Guests were entertained by the BCCC cheerleaders and Hilltop Singers.

Some seniors took the assessment test in the morning and in the afternoon all were taken on campus housing tours and to talk to instructors about different fields of study. They were also guests of the college for the basketball games and the dance.

Seniors found many things helpful about Senior Day. Joe Clark, Larned said the most helpful thing was, "finding out our placement in the assessment and finding out how we rank among others." Julie Keast, Larned said, "You get to see the housing and the classrooms, you just get to see everything."

Homecoming is often an important time in a college year. BCCC has not had an alumni association to participate in the celebration in the past but may consider beginning such an organization in the future.

Cougars finish season in 27-9

By Lynnette Wilkening

The Cougar women's basketball team was a young team as they had eight freshman and only three sophomores. Head Women's Basketball Coach, Jerry McCarty said this was an exciting year for both him and the team since they represented our region in the National Junior College Tournament in Tyler, Texas.

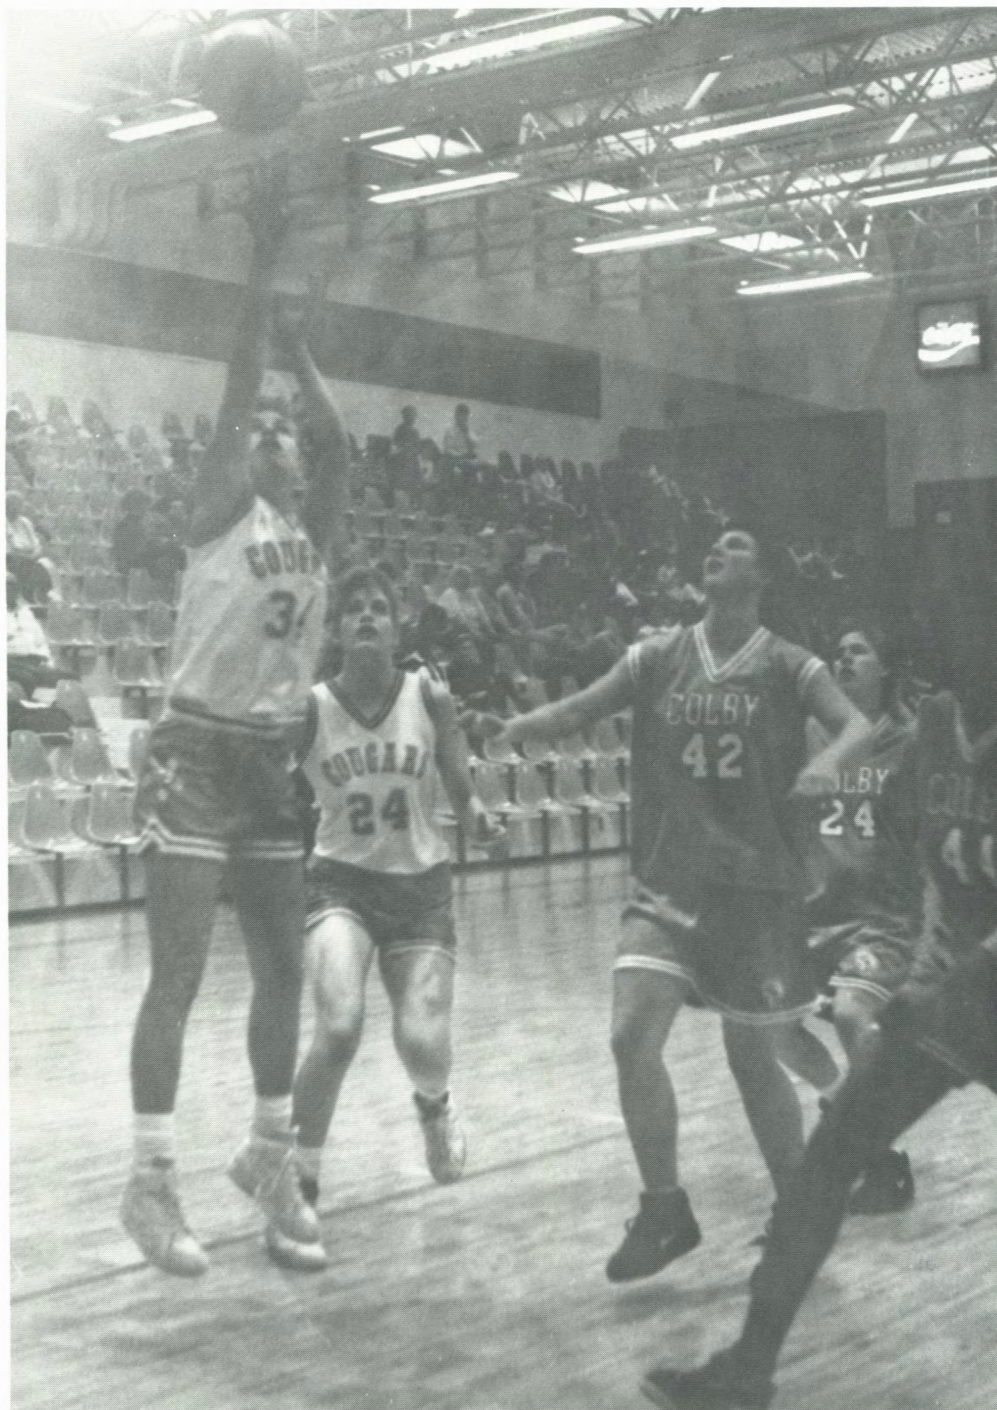

The strong competitive freshman along with the excellent leadership by the sophomores led the Cougar women to a co-championship title in the Jayhawk West conference and Region VI championships for the 1991-92 season.

Karla House, Cunningham sophomore; Kelly Dennis, Rose Hill sophomore; and Tammy Mann, Assaria sophomore; were selected to the Jayhawk West first team. Mann also received second team honors in Region VI and honorable mention All-American. Sandy Hoge, Larned freshman, was selected to the first team, All-Tournament Team, in Region VI.

The Cougar women compiled a 15 game winning streak on their way to a 27-9 overall record and a 11-1 conference finish.

Cheerleaders take 10th place at nationals

By Lea Johnson

The third time proved to be a charm for the Barton County Community College cheerleading squad. For the first time in three years they qualified for finals at the cheerleading and dance nationals in Dallas. The dance line also competed, but did not qualify for finals.

The two squads spent hours of practice and hard work to put together quality routines. Most of the choreography was created by Mike Waters, a Kansas University yell leader. Two new assistant coaches, Joanna Semander, who moved from Texas to coach the cheerleaders, and Dannah Feldman, who returned after dancing at BCCC from 1988-1990 to coach the dancers, helped Head Coach Debbie Warren.

Feldman compared the differences between coaching and participating in nationals. "Being on the other side is much more nerve racking. You feel like you are out there dancing for each dancer and you notice every mistake or bobble made, but I love being on this side."

Practice started in October to make a video tape to send to the National Cheerleading Association to qualify for Nationals. The exciting news that both squads qualified came Nov. 15.

"Practice was very hard and took a lot of time and dedication, but since we all got along so well and we were all working toward the same goal, we made it fun," Robin Brown, Gardner freshman, said.

In Dallas the squads competed against other squads from NCAA Division II, III, IAA, and community colleges. The cheerleaders competed against 26 other colleges and placed 10th overall. They finished third in the nation among community colleges.

Semander said, "Starting a new job is not only exciting, but also a bit scary; it challenges our strengths and abilities.

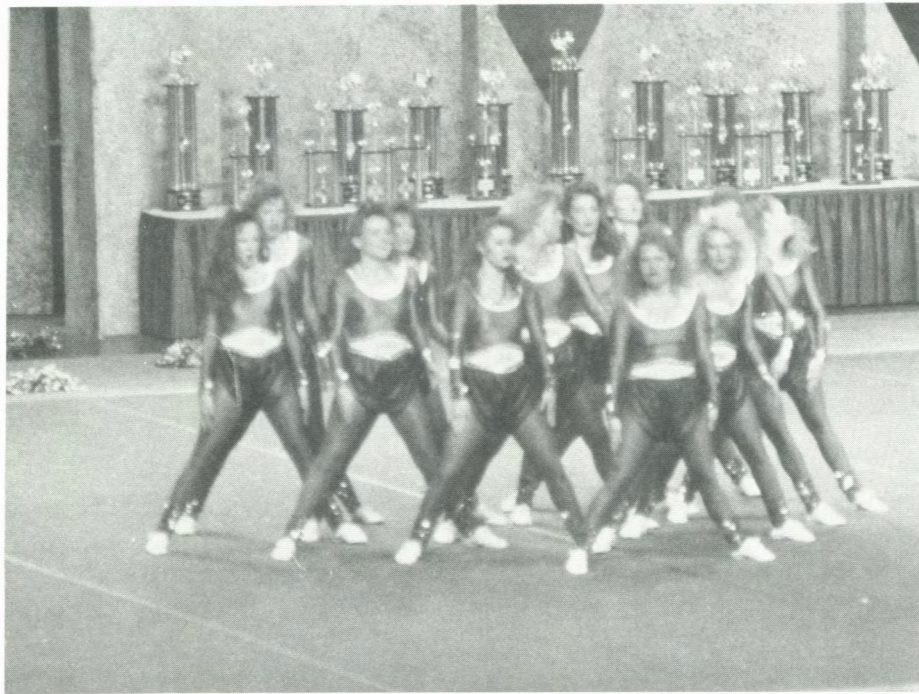

Now that our national competition is over, I am relieved to know that I am capable of successfully coaching one of the nations top squads."

Chad Jerke, Great Bend freshman, said, "Since I have never been to anything like this before, I didn't know what to expect. It was great. I'm glad I had the opportunity to go, and I am willing to go again next year."

The dancers competed with squads from 15 other colleges and universities. They placed 11th in the competition and ranked fourth in the nation among community colleges.

Warren said the two squads' performances were "outstanding. We were competing against schools much larger than ours, and I knew the competition was going to be extremely tough. We were able to compete very well with inexperienced squads, which will help us next year."

Cougar team takes second in conference season play

By Lynnette Wilkening

The season for the Barton County Community College Cougar women's softball team was one of inconsistency. They ended their season at the Region VI tournament with a 23-22 record and a second place finish in conference play.

Head Women's Softball Coach, Tom Curtis, said the inconsistency was apparent at the Region VI tournament when they played a near-perfect game against Dodge City, a team which had given them trouble in conference play. They went on to lose to Butler County in the next game, a team they had previously defeated 17-3.

The two BCCC pitchers proved to be highlights on this season's team as both Shannon Stroth, Topeka sophomore, and Karen Vaad, Fremont, Neb., sophomore, gave consistent efforts and had nearly identical records. The opposing teams averaged only 1.6 runs per game.

Stroth earned honorable mention honors from the Region VI ballots cast by all Region VI coaches. Kelly Dennis, Rose Hill sophomore, received first team honors in the region and Michelle Barnhart received a second team honor in the region.

Curtis said the contribution from his sophomores this year was significant and he expected the six returning freshman would provide for a strong nucleus next year.

Chinese engineering college to become sister college to BCCC

Plans are underway for Barton County Community College to sign an agreement with a technical school in China to become sister colleges.

In the later part of the fall semester BCCC sent a delegation to China to visit Chengdu Aeronautic Engineering College. President Jimmie Downing, Ph.D., signed a preliminary agreement with the Chinese college to become sister schools at that time.

The Chinese delegation from the engineering college visited the BCCC campus in April. Several activities were planned to show our enthusiasm about the idea of having a sister college. This may mean that personnel from the participating schools soon will be exchanged for short periods of time.

The delegates from China ate lunch with BCCC students, faculty and staff in the Union and had a chance to talk with the people on campus. They toured campus and attended a cosmetology fashion show. They attended a barbecue at Camp Aldrich along with BCCC employees. They also toured several facilities in nearby cities.

The educators from China attended an all-campus assembly where they were entertained by the yell leaders, dance line, and Hilltop Singers. During the assembly, a video tape of Downing's earlier visit to China was shown to those attending.

The delegates were expected to sign the sister college agreement after it was translated into their language.

YPC brings future college students to campus

By Robin Monroe

During a special time in the summer children can be seen streaming off buses early in the morning and filtering throughout campus to attend classes at Young People's College at Barton Community College.

A 6-year-old may go to "Act it Out" class where students use games, singing, dancing, and body movement and transfer antics into center stage entertainment for family and friends.

A 15-year-old can be seen at "See You in the Funnies" class where students create cartoons and learn the techniques of modern cartooning as well as history of some comic creators.

"Grandma's Attic" teaches 10 to 14-year-olds to take what they might think is junk and turn it into collectables. They also learn to restore and preserve family heirlooms.

"Dino Digs" is for 6 to 10-year-olds to learn about the Tyrannosaurus Rex, Stegosaurus, and the Brontosaurus dinosaurs. Students took a field trip to Fort Hays Sternberg Museum to dig for fossils.

In "Junior Cadet Police Academy" students 10 to 15 years old learned about the inner workings of police investigations, drug enforcement, firearm safety and police patrol. They took tours of law enforcement agencies and visited with law officials.

YPC offers academic classes like computer graphics, calculator skills, and video classes. Some athletic classes include cheerleading, gymnastics, track and field, golf and basic fishing.

Costs of classes in YPC run from $20 to $70 with the exception of some overnight athletic camps costing up to $140. Some $20 scholarships are available based on financial need.

YPC started three years ago with 700 students. Last summer there were more than 900 students participating in classes.
